LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

Base Ball Notes.

The Boston players will sign several of the crack players of the California League for the brotherhood.

Capt. Comiskey, with his celebrated St. Louis Browns, played the Dallas, Texas, team Saturday afternoon at Oak Cliff Park in the latter city. The game resulted, Dallas, 12; St. Louis Browns, 8, with Joyce of the Dallas team the hero.

Somebody was reading to Pete Brown the other day about the overthrow of the Brazilian empire. "What?" says Pete, "is dat danged sucker gone? Well, I'm glad of dat. Why, he was do roo-tenest umpire in do whole gang. He was alius givin' Louisville de worst of it."

Our Diocese.

The annual convention of the diocese of Springfield of the Protestant Episcopal church will be held at St. Paul's Pro-cathedral in that city, commencing on Tuesday, December 3, and will be opened with a high choral celebration at 10:30 o'clock, with the Rt. Rev. George F. Seymour, Bishop of Springfield, as celebrant. The sermon will be preached by Rev. M. M. Goodwin rector of St. John's church, Decatur. The annual diocesan convention of this diocese has heretofore been held in the spring, but it was decided at the last convention to change the time of meeting.

Death of an Old Soldier.

John L. Forin, a veteran of Co. A, 41st Illinois Infantry, died Friday night near Riverton, Ill., and was buried on Sunday. His age was 58 years. The deceased was a native of Macon county, and lived in Decatur many years. When the war broke out he enlisted in Captain M. F. Kanan's company August 5, 1861, and was mustered out August 20, 1861. Jack was a son of the former owner of the 160 acres of land now in possession of Dr. H. C. John and family, southeast of the city. It was sold years ago by old man Forin to William Martin. Captain Kanan was at Riverton to arrange for the funeral of his old comrade.

Sol Smith Russell.

The most interesting event at the opera house Thursday night will be the appearance of Sol Smith Russell, comedian who has won a national reputation by his delineations of comic characters, in Mr. Edward E. Kidder's new comedy entitled "A Poor Relation." In the new play Mr. Russell will be seen in the role of Noah Vale, an impecunious inventor, and it is said to give him every opportunity for the display of the quaint and unctuous humor which he possesses in such abundance, and also provides him with chances for indulging his genius for pathos. "A Poor Relation" will be given a handsome stage setting, entirely new and beautiful scenery, having been painted specially for this production by Walter Burridge. Mr. Russell is the embodiment of comedy, whose acting is not confined to his face. His body, arms, feet, hands, legs, and even his clothes seem to act. Manager Berger has selected a competent company that includes the names of Alfred Hudson, Charles Kent, Louis Carpenter, Maud Howard, Grace Filkins, Lillian Owen, Merri Osborn, Master Gerald Richardson, and little Hazel Chappell. The sale of seats opens to-morrow evening.

The Casner School.

On Wednesday evening, November 27, despite the extreme inclemency of the weather, a goodly number of our people, mostly patrons of the school, assembled at the school house and were most profitably entertained by listening to an interesting program, consisting of songs, declaimations, and selections rendered by the school under the supervision of the teacher, Miss Keethers. The school and teacher cannot be too highly commended, considering the short preparation. We might make reference to some special selections, but, so doing we would do others injustice, as considered by other listeners. After the entertainment came the main feature, a basket festival, from which a sufficient sum was realized to purchase a handsome library. Everyone seemed to consider the importance of the object for which the money was to be raised and opened their hearts and pocketbooks accordingly. At a late hour the crowd went home, feeling that they had spent an evening long to be remembered. We shall eagerly look forward to the time when Casner school gives us another such an entertainment. Farmers' Organizations.

Of the 4,500,000 farmers in the United States at least 1,000,000 are organized, and on Tuesday next a great meeting will be held in St. Louis looking towards the consolidation of all existing organizations and further extensions, by which it is hoped within a short time to include in a consolidated association not less than 4,000,000 farmers. Speaking of the nature of the organizations, W. A. Peffer, editor of the Kansas Farmer, says in a current number of the Farmer:

Some of these associations have originated in the Southwest, some in other parts of the South and some in the West. Their general purpose is to express the importance of the agricultural interest as to cause other interests to pay greater heed to the farmer. The complaint of all these organizations is, in substance, that the middlemen and money-lenders have, in one way or another, great advantage over the farmer, which advantage has been used to his impoverishment. All these organizations are secret, and although in a purely local sense none of them are political, in a larger sense they all have a political significance, inasmuch as they all look forward to an opportunity for the farmers' vote to change legislation which they conceive to be particularly adverse to the agricultural interests.

Says the Springfield News: It was on the Monday evening after that awful Sunday in 1861 when Fort Sumter surrendered. The great surge of patriotism was rolling over the north. A meeting has been called to meet at the Court House at Valparaiso, Porter County, Ind. Nobody knew just what to do. A few speeches were made, when a young lawyer, just graduated, came to the front and said: "Treason has raised its head. Fort Sumter is in the hands of rebels. President Lincoln wants soldiers, and I say to-night, as Ethan Allen once said: 'The stars and stripes shall float over Fort Sumter or Molly Pierce will be a widow. Get out your muster roll, I want to enlist," and following this speech a company was enlisted as fast as men could write their names. That briefless young barrister was Gilbert A. Pierce, yesterday elected United States Senator from North Dakota.

Pneumonia and Bronchitis carry off One-Third of the Human Race.

It is not generally known that Pneumonia and Bronchitis carry off one-third of the human race, but such are the facts, and what is more surprising, both of the above diseases result from neglecting a common ordinary cold. A cough should never be neglected. Every time you catch a cold, drink beer, and it stays longer. Balsam of Horehound Syrup is the best remedy in the world for Pneumonia, Bronchitis and all Throat and Lung trouble. If you have any Throat trouble, call for Baldard's Horehound Syrup and take no other.

Sold by John A. Swearingen, Druggist.

The annual dinner which the Massachusetts Tariff Reform League announces for December 31 is probably the last which it will hold. The tariff reform party is now in power, and the reform which it will make promises to wipe out all such pseudo reformers as the Massachusetts organization as completely as emancipation abolished the abolition societies a quarter of a century ago.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge Munday, Esq., County Atty. Clay Co., Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malaria Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying he positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters."

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all Malaria Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequalled. Price, 50c and $1 at Dr. A. J. Stoner's Drug Stores. 6m

ANOTHER HOLOCAUST

An Alleged Fire-Proof Building as a Seething Furnace.

HUMAN BEINGS CAUGHT IN A FIRE-TRAP

Destruction of the Tribune Building, at Minneapolis, With an Awful Loss of Life—Thrilling Scenes and Incidents.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 1.—The ten-story Tribune building was gutted by fire, which started about half-past ten o'clock last evening, and it is almost certain that half a dozen people perished. This number may be doubled when the facts become known, it being impossible, owing to the confusion, to get at the exact truth, as nearly one hundred people were employed in various capacities on the seventh floor when the fire broke out. The fire originated in a law office on the third story of the building. The elevator man noticed the smell of smoke, and called the attention of some of the persons around the building to it. The cry of fire was raised and several persons went down stairs from the seventh story to investigate and then returned to work. Before long smoke began to fill the narrow stairway—the only one in the building—and every one began to make leisurely preparations to leave, no immediate danger being feared. The only exits to the building, which was as usual erroneously supposed to be fire-proof, were a narrow staircase, scarcely wide enough for two persons to come down abreast, the elevators and a single escape in the north end of the building. Several persons had made their escape in the meantime, but in less than ten minutes the flames sought the elevator shaft, which, acting as a mammoth flue, conveyed the fire to the top story, and soon the editorial rooms in the same side of the building where the fire originated were a seething mass of flames. In a few minutes it reached the other side, where the composing room was situated.

A general alarm was turned in, and all the engines in the city responded to the call. The imprisoned printers gathered at the windows in the south end and shrieked desperately for aid. "Hurry the ladders" was the awful refrain that rent the air. "Hurry the ladders, for God's sake!" shrieked with vehemence and power by dozens in peril of their lives by an awful death, was all they could utter. The vast crowd that from the opposite side viewed the fire do its work shouted words of encouragement to them in strenuous endeavors to cheer them up. The long ladder seemed to move at a snail's pace, but was finally rested in position, and the crowd began to descend, the flames making steady encroachments from the corner where the frightened men had huddled like cowering animals. The life nets were brought and some were saved by this means. The entire building at this time, less than an hour after the blaze was discovered, was on fire. High above the hoarse cries of the firemen, the rattle of engines and the stamp of horses, could be heard the agonizing screams for aid sent forth by the crowd of men hemmed in by the swirling masses of flame which surged around the top windows of the doomed building. When the ladder was finally adjusted, after what to firemen, printers, and spectators alike seemed an eternity, the employees of the Tribune began to descend. So eager were they to get out of their scorching prison that they would have fallen headlong out of the window and been dashed to pieces on the sidewalk, seven stories below, had they not been restrained by their more cool-headed fellows. As it was, however, two of the terror-stricken men broke away from their would-be preservers and dropped from a window to the sidewalk. They were both instantly killed.

While the work of rescue was going on from the window where the crowd of printers and others had assembled, Prof. Olsen, president of the Vermillion (Dak.) University, met a terrible fate. Mr. Olson had been spending Thanksgiving here with his brother, and Friday evening made a call upon a friend who was employed in the editorial rooms of the Tribune. While seated in his friend's room the alarm of fire was raised, but as investigation seemed to show that no particular danger need be apprehended, both sat down and resumed their conversation. In a few minutes every body realized the fact that nearly all hope of escape had been cut off, and Prof. Olsen and his friend started for the fire escape leading from the sixth story on which were located the editorial rooms. Some of those who were on that floor when the blaze was discovered are of the opinion that the Tribune employees escaped.

In an interview to-day Chief Stetson talked as follows on the subject: "In the first place, there was some unavoidable delay in sending the alarm. I had no knowledge that there was a fire until it had made such headway that it could not be checked. The man who pulled the alarm box was so excited that he did not do it properly, and sent in a call for police instead of fire. This he did three times, as the records at police headquarters will show. Finally the proper alarm came in, and I arrived on the ground shortly after. I took in the situation at once, and after sending in a general alarm, gave my attention to rescuing those poor fellows away up in the composing-room. Of what importance is a building when some twenty human lives are at stake? I gave my personal attention to the manipulation of the ladders and left the supervision of the steamers to my assistants. Calling out to the men to do all they could to rescue those on the seventh floor, I ordered the ladder run up. The boys worked with a will. We planted the ladder opposite a window where there was a number of men looking out and began to run it up. The telephone wires were in the way and we lost precious time trying to avoid them. Then our ropes got entangled in the wires. When we did finally get the ladder up to its proper place the heat had driven the printers further over toward the corner of the building. So we had to take it down, place it further down the street and run it up again, encountering the same difficulty as before in the interference of the wires. But we reached the men at last and saved all who had not yet jumped to the ground. Meantime the steamers had begun their work. Unfortunately the steamer No. 1 blew out her air chamber and caused a short delay. But we soon got the streams flowing and doing good work. It is a very easy matter to criticize the fire department and accuse them of negligence of duty and tardiness of action. But I would like to ask the critics what they would do under the same circumstances. In my opinion the department did all that could be done. I charge the loss of life to the owners of the building, who failed to provide proper fire escapes."

Jimmy Kohl, a messenger boy on the Tribune, is said to be missing.

Chas. Alf Williams and his brother, William, had narrow escapes and both are badly burned.

All night long the steamers threw water on the burning and smoking ruins without cessation. The force that was on duty during the night was relieved by another, and the good work went on unceasingly. A few spectators stood around during the entire night, and as soon as light began to dawn in the east others came, so that as early as eight o'clock there was a considerable crowd on hand. Dark and forbidding the walls of the wrecked building loomed up in the gray light of early dawn, and as the spectators gazed the awful fact that frenzied human beings, half-stifled with smoke and singed with flames had but a few hours before made the death-plunge from the giddy height to the hard, cruel stone pavement below, seemed to dawn upon them afresh, with all of its terrible force.

As the day advanced and the light became more distinct, the completeness of the wreck became more and more evident. The upper floors had given way, and their weight, together with the job presses and heavy iron safes, had carried all before them into a confused mass in the basement. Here and there an iron girder remained in position, but so insecurely fixed that it appeared that but a slight jar would be required to send it crashing to the bottom. A few of these girders were bent and twisted out of shape by the heat and the heavy masses that fell upon them from above. It had been hoped that the solidity of the first floor, supported as it was by heavy iron posts and girders, would support the overlying mass and thus protect the pressmen in the basement. But an examination of the ruins proved the probable delusiveness of this hope. Every thing had given way before the stupendous weight, and the basement was piled full of the heavy debris. The vaults in the newspaper offices appeared to be in good condition, and unless the heat was too intense the contents will be found to be in a good state of preservation. The walls are cracked but little, and in the opinion of Chief Stetson there is no danger of their falling.

Charles A. Smith, the elevator man on the night service, did very creditable work. He was a new man, having only been in the place since the first of the week. After the fire broke out he made five trips (the last when the shaft was actually on fire), and saved a number of people. Smith says he smelled fire for three-quarters of an hour before he could find its location. After looking on all the floors he finally felt the heat on the third floor and was about to break in the door of the fateful room when the transom burst and the flames sprang up. He is confident that the fire originated in E. A. Harmon's office, and worked through two partitions before breaking into the hallway, but this seems well-nigh impossible. Smith is sure that more people were burned than have been reported. He says that about five minutes before the fire was discovered he carried a heavy dark-complexioned lady to the sixth floor. She asked for the editorial rooms of the Pioneer-Press. He did not take her back in the elevator, and he is sure she could not have gone down the stairway. Smith also says that a tall young man, with a black mustache, shot himself on the seventh floor, near the composing-room door. Smith was up on his last trip and called to the young man to come into the elevator, but he seemed dazed by the heat and smoke and deliberately drew a revolver and fired into his own head, falling, as Smith supposes, quite dead. Just before he fired the shot he exclaimed: "My God; my wife and —," then the bullet did its work.

Chief Stetson charges that the loss of life is due to the absence of proper fire escapes.

There was some apparently unavoidable delay in turning in the alarm for the fire department, and after they arrived on the ground it seemed to be a long time before they got to work. This was a general cause of comment by the spectators.

In an interview to-day Chief Stetson talked as follows on the subject: "In the first place, there was some unavoidable delay in sending the alarm. I had no knowledge that there was a fire until it had made such headway that it could not be checked. The man who pulled the alarm box was so excited that he did not do it properly, and sent in a call for police instead of fire. I charge the loss of life to the owners of the building, who failed to provide proper fire escapes."

Minneapolis Typographical Union No. 42 met this afternoon in Labor Temple to take action on the calamity. A committee on resolutions was appointed, and pending their report the recording secretary began collecting evidence regarding the repeated efforts of the men to have fire escapes placed on the building and to place such evidence at the disposal of the coroner.

Anton J. Dahl, a book-binder, was on an upper floor and is believed now to be among the dead.

The following is a complete list of the dead and injured so far as can be ascertained:

DEAD.

Milton Pickett, assistant city editor of the Pioneer-Press.

James F. Igoe, Associated Press operator.

Edward Olsen, president of the University of South Dakota, at Vermillion.

Jerry Jenkins, a printer.

Robert McCutcheon, a printer.

W. H. Milman, commercial editor of the Tribune.

Walter E. Miles, operator and agent of the Associated Press.

INJURED.

William Lunn, printer; burned on hands and face.

E. C. Andrews, printer; burned on hands and face.

George E. Warden, printer; burned on hands and face.

Frank Gerber, a deaf mute printer; hands and face burned.

Adam Weischnir, printer; hurt about the hips.

Charles Alf Williams, managing editor of the Tribune; badly burned about the head and face.

W. H. Williams, foreman of composing-room; badly burned about the face and hands.

S. H. Jones, Pioneer-Press reporter; hands and face slightly burned; and Frank Hoover, printer; burned about the neck.

THE 51ST CONGRESS.

Gathering of Law-Makers at the National Capital To-Day.

A FORECAST OF THE SESSION'S WORK.

The Allison Tariff Bill—A Bill to Abolish or Amend the Civil-Service Law—The Inter-State Commerce Law, Etc., Etc.

The Opening of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Congress which assembles at noon to-day meets under very peculiar conditions. A Republican Senate and a Democratic House will meet to transact business which will be submitted to a Republican President for approval. It would seem that where there is such perfect political harmony, harmony of ideas and interests should be found also.

But whether this harmony will be present at the deliberations of the two Houses of Congress or not remains to be seen.

There are many questions to be considered by Congress in the location of the World's Fair of 1892. The claims of New York, Washington, St. Louis and Chicago will be warmly pressed forward in the beginning of the session and the question will likely not be disposed of until January or February.

As a result of the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the question of the preservation of American forests will be brought strongly before Congress. The question of the further development by irrigation of the arid lands of the West will also be considered.

Among the general subjects which will come up for consideration are the following: The abolition or regulation of trusts; the establishment of postal savings banks; the organization of post-offices aboard trans-Atlantic steamships; an increase in the number of judicial circuits; to relieve the pressure of unfinished business on the Supreme Court; the abolition of lotteries as far as Congress can accomplish that object; the payment of Indian depreciation claims of Western pioneers, and the organization of a special tribunal to adjudicate those claims; the granting of subsidies to the American merchant marine; the Blair Educational bill; an investigation of the affairs of the pension-office, and the Civil-service Commission; the settlement of the dispute over the seal fisheries; the total exclusion of Chinese and other objectionable immigrants, and possibly a proposition to settle the race question in the South by limiting the representation in Congress to a proportion warranted by the white population of the different States alone.

The House will have to take under almost immediate consideration the rules which are to govern its deliberations. An effort will be made to curb the power which the rules of the last House gave to the minority, but this will meet with vigorous opposition from the Democrats, and a general impression seems to prevail that the rules will differ in no material way from those of the last House. The House has also to consider seventeen contested election cases.

A caucus of Republican Senators will be held in the near future to consider a proposed change in the officers of the Senate.

Fast Time to Florida.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—The fastest time ever known between the Ohio river and Florida was inaugurated this morning by the Queen & Crescent, Western & Atlantic and the Central railroad of Georgia. Solid trains with Mann boudoir and Pullman palace cars will leave this city at 8:20 a.m., arriving at Jacksonville, Fla., at half-past eleven o'clock on the following morning, making the distance in twenty-seven hours and twenty minutes.

Two correlative questions which agitated the last Congress will come up before the Fifty-first Congress for a great deal of discussion. An effort will be made to amend the tariff laws, and a strong influence will be brought to bear to have the internal revenue laws repealed. It is generally understood that the Republican majority in the House and Senate will make an effort to have a bill on the line of the Allison Tariff bill of last year put through both houses and sent to the President. The discussion of this question may be postponed for several months. It is bound to absorb a great deal of the attention of both houses. Mr. Mills of Texas, has been quoted recently as saying that the Democrats in the House would possibly as yet to obtain a list of the injured, of whom there are known to be many. One of the unidentified bodies at the morgue has since been recognized as that of Patrick Miles, the day Associated Press operator and also the night agent of that company. How he met his death is not yet known.

Minneapolis Typographical Union No. 42 met this afternoon in Labor Temple to take action on the calamity. A committee on resolutions was appointed, and pending their report the recording secretary began collecting evidence regarding the repeated efforts of the men to have fire escapes placed on the building and to place such evidence at the disposal of the coroner.

Senator Farwell, of Illinois, will introduce a bill to abolish the civil-service examinations. He has discussed the matter with the President, and told the President what he proposes to do. He denounces the law as a menace to good government.

Representative Chandler, of Georgia, will also introduce a bill to repeal the Civil-service law.

Representative Hitt, of Illinois, in a recent interview, expressed the opinion that the Civil-service law would be amended, but not repealed, and this seems to be the view of a great many of the older members of the House. Mr. Hitt also believes that the Inter-State Commerce law will be amended.

The question of the relations between the United States and Canada, and of the effect of competition of the Canadian Pacific railroad and its connections with the railroads of this country will come up for discussion in the Senate under reports to be presented by special committees which have been investigating the subject during the past summer.

The committee on Pacific railroads, which has been to the Pacific coast this summer, will make some recommendations to the Senate as to the forfeiture of the lands granted to the Pacific railroads. The general impression is that legislation on this subject will affect only those lands which remain unclaimed at the present day.

There is little doubt that a river and harbor bill will be passed by this Congress. The local demands for it are of such a character that they can not be ignored, particularly as Congress, at its last session, made no appropriation for the improvement of rivers and harbors.

The subject of coast defenses will be debated in the House and Senate, with the result it would be hard to determine.

A number of amendments have been prepared to be offered to the existing contract labor laws. Some applications have been made to the Secretary of the Treasury for the admission of skilled laborers to establish industries of which American workmen have no knowledge.

It is claimed that the enforcement of the law in these cases works unnecessary hardship. To prevent this Congress will be asked to amend the law. Some minor amendments will also be necessary to make some of its provisions effective.

Congress will be asked at an early day to provide a form of government for Oklahoma. A bill for this is now being prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The National pension committee of the Grand Army of the Republic has formulated a number of pension bills which will be offered for consideration.

Principal among these is the Per Diem Allowance Pension bill and the Total Disability Pension bill. The usual amount of private pension legislation will be offered for consideration.

One of the early questions to be considered by Congress is the location of the World's Fair of 1892.

The claims of New York, Washington, St. Louis and Chicago will be warmly pressed forward in the beginning of the session and the question will likely not be disposed of until January or February.

As a result of the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the question of the preservation of American forests will be brought strongly before Congress. The question of the further development by irrigation of the arid lands of the West will also be considered.

Among the general subjects which will come up for consideration are the following:

The abolition or regulation of trusts; the establishment of postal savings banks; the organization of post-offices aboard trans-Atlantic steamships; an increase in the number of judicial circuits; to relieve the pressure of unfinished business on the Supreme Court; the abolition of lotteries as far as Congress can accomplish that object; the payment of Indian depreciation claims of Western pioneers, and the organization of a special tribunal to adjudicate those claims; the granting of subsidies to the American merchant marine; the Blair Educational bill; an investigation of the affairs of the pension-office, and the Civil-service Commission; the settlement of the dispute over the seal fisheries; the total exclusion of Chinese and other objectionable immigrants, and possibly a proposition to settle the race question in the South by limiting the representation in Congress to a proportion warranted by the white population of the different States alone.

The House will have to take under almost immediate consideration the rules which are to govern its deliberations.

An effort will be made to curb the power which the rules of the last House gave to the minority, but this will meet with vigorous opposition from the Democrats, and a general impression seems to prevail that the rules will differ in no material way from those of the last House.

The House has also to consider seventeen contested election cases.

A caucus of Republican Senators will be held in the near future to consider a proposed change in the officers of the Senate.

MONDAY EVE, DEC. 2, 1889.

The Next Struggle.

Congress assembled at noon to-day, and the House elected Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, speaker. The President's message was read and the usual adjournment finished up the first day's session of the Fifty-first Congress. During the next two weeks there will be not much of interest, probably, at least not much that the people will get to know anything about, but it goes without saying that the formation of the House committee will give Mr. Speaker Reed all the trouble that will be necessary to his existence.

Normally the formation of the standing committees is a matter for which the speaker is solely responsible, and it would seem to be an easy matter for him to make his assignments without unnecessary delay. But there are considerations aside from the mere fitness of the members for the respective duties of each, and no speaker was ever elected with enough of chairmanships to go around among those whose preferences must be consulted. It is the rule of the House that the chairman of the Ways and Means committee has precedence over every other chairman in the way of privilege, and by the unwritten custom he is the leader of the House. Consequently the place has always been much sought after, and it has come to be a custom of every speaker to put at the head of the Ways and Means committee the unsuccessful candidate for the speakership. Mr. Speaker Reed will have a comparatively easy task in this regard, and can follow the custom of the past by appointing Mr. McKinley to this chairmanship, as well as put his most important committee in the hands of a most capable man and one who has seen service on the committee. Mr. Cannon, who stood at the head of the Republican members of the committee on Appropriations in the last Congress, by the same rule ought to be made chairman of that committee, and the new speaker will doubtless appoint him. And so of others. Men who are peculiarly fitted by training and experience will be without doubt selected to head the most important committees, but there are a large proportion of new members in the present Congress and they will expect important chairmanships by virtue of their support of the successful candidate for speaker, and be disappointed if they do not get them. It is doubtful whether Mr. Reed will pass by men of experience and long service merely because they were partisans of some other candidate, and pick out men for the important places who have no redeeming trait save their support of the speaker. We say it is doubtful if he does this. It is not the way of men who themselves have had years of experience on the floor, for they know how valuable this is. Capt. Rowell of this district, ought to be at the head of the Elections committee. He stood at the head of the Republican members of that committee in the last House, and made considerable reputation on it, and it would be manifestly dangerous to replace him with a new man.

But the next two weeks will witness a lively shaking up among the members in their hunt after committee assignments, and the fact that the scramble after desirable places will necessarily be very privately conducted will make it none the less exciting. Mr. Speaker Reed will have his hands full, and will be awake many a night trying to properly distribute his favors and pay his political debts at the same time.

The Supreme Court vacancy is talked about afresh again, with an intimation that it will be filled by the President this week. A new man has been mentioned within the past few days, with an intimation of a strong probability that ex-President Hayes will be the man.

PROF. ROBERT PATTERSON, editor and one of the proprietors of the Presbyterian Banner, died at 4 o'clock Saturday morning at his home in Sewickley, Pa., of paralysis. The deceased was 69 years of age, and was well known throughout the country.

The repairs on the executive mansion at Springfield are about completed, and Gov. L. F. L. will have a much better house to live in than any of his predecessors. It is announced that the contracts were let at very low prices, and that the state got about $20,000 worth of improvements for $13,500.

EDWARD MCPHERSON, of Pennsylvania, who will be clerk of the House of Representatives for the next two years, will not find the duties of that post altogether unfamiliar. He held the office from 1893 to 1875, and would have continued in it longer had not Republican power in the House ended temporarily in that year. In the only other House controlled by the Republicans since then—that of 1851-1853, which came into existence with the Garfield-Arthur Administration—he was also Clerk. McPherson has already served in that station longer than any other man who has held the office at any time since the beginning of the Government, and none of them ever surpassed him in efficiency or popularity.

Recital of Pupils.

Miss Mamie S. Condell's piano pupils participated in a pleasing recital at the home of the accomplished teacher Friday evening, and quite a variety of classical music was executed to the manifest pleasure of the large company of friends present. The pupils are advancing rapidly under the tuition of Miss Condell. The pupils are the Misses Anna Cool, Irene Brown, Irene Wood, Clara Green, Clara Brown, Hattie Logan, Lily Condell, Adele Blackstone, Maud Barnes, Elvia Mark, Lillie Acuff, Anna Brown, Nita Thatcher, May Condell, Laura Tullis, Miss Honson, Bess Condell, Alberta Conde 1 Miss Hogan and Alvah Long.

The program as rendered was as follows:

"Waltz".....Miss Alberta Condell.....Roseng

Each pupil before departing for home was presented with a dainty box of bonbons as a souvenir of the occasion.

"Look Out for Safes."

That's what the reporter said this morning when Kid McCoy, one of the professional safe-blowers of the Stowaway company, to appear to-night, paid the REPUBLICAN a call. The "Kid" is a man past 50 years of age, and is anything but a boy in appearance. He speaks knowingly about the different methods of cracking safes, and says the safe-blowing scene to-night, in which "Spike" Hennessey takes part, will be full of thrilling interest.

But the next two weeks will witness a lively shaking up among the members in their hunt after committee assignments, and the fact that the scramble after desirable places will necessarily be very privately conducted will make it none the less exciting. Mr. Speaker Reed will have his hands full, and will be awake many a night trying to properly distribute his favors and pay his political debts at the same time.

LITTLE MAIDS AS COOKS.

Schoolgirls Taught to Burn Their Fingers in a Training Class.

A group of bright eyed, pink cheeked girls came tripping down the steps of the Edward Shippen school on Friday a few minutes before noon. They were of assorted sizes and styles of beauty, but their ages all clustered closely about sweet sixteen. There was one little flaxen haired Miss whose lisp and mien betokened that she had but recently entered her teens, and close behind her a tall, dignified maid of dusky hue, who looked as if she would be eighteen some of these days. These were the extremes. Fifteen years may have made fair average.

The absence of the usual bulky bags of books, and the character of the girls' chatter, which was all about butter and burns and blisters, instead of propositions and logarithms, evinced that this was no ordinary bevy of schoolgirls. There were twenty of them, all told, and they had been to cooking school.

The quantity of edibles turned out by these two score fairies during the process of the first lesson would scarcely suffice to satisfy the cravings of a lusty appetite; but then Rome was not built in a day; neither can an elaborate meal be concocted in an hour. A crockful of croissants or sippets and a faultlessly baked potato were the only tangible results of yesterday morning's practice. Several little maids, however, treasured up a precious little cut or a glistening burn as evidence of hard work, and all had their craniums just chock full of knowledge as to the best ways and means to run a kitchen.

"Housekeeper No. 7, I appoint you to take care of the stove for this morning. No. 11, you must look after the sink, and you, No. 4, will be in general charge of the room." These were Miss Stone's words as she called the class to order. She wore a tiny cap of soft white lace and a wide spreading apron, and moved and talked with a grace and ease that would invest the meanest kitchen with the dignity of a drawing room. The somewhat unpoetical task of fire-building was the first duty of the morning, and into this work the teacher entered with such zest and understanding that the "little maid in school" who looked on and learned thought it great fun, and just as easy as flirting. After a few moments' instruction they knew all about removing the ashes, arranging the kindling, applying the match and starting a blaze, all without a drop of kerosene or begrimed fingers.

The big, brightly polished range stood in the corner of the room; the up-and-down span sink, surmounted by a row of dippers and dishpans, stood opposite, and a far end, apportioned off to serve as the laundry, was set forth with boiler, clothes horse and the other necessary accoutrements. Along the center of the room were ranged the five tables which represented the scenes of maneuvers of the twenty cooks. These were decked with spoons, knives, forks, plates, chopping boards and scrubbing brushes, and every article a paragon of perfection. Each pup was furnished with a seat at table, and after work was over each was required to polish her respective corner with sponges and scrubbing brush until it dazzled.

Against the east wall stood a big cupboard, shiny and crochety in its newness, provided with innumerable nooks and crannies, each devoted to its particular utensil. "A place for everything, and everything in its place," suggested Miss Stone, as she pointed out to her group of open mouthed learners the way of the Dover egg beater and the whereabouts of the glass lemon squeezer. "The rolling pins must be piled right here, the cullender hung just there and the dish towels placed far back in the right hand corner of the third drawer from the top, on the left hand side, between the tea cloths and the dusters," she went on. "We put the matches in this covered crock so the rats won't nibble them and set the house on fire. The bread we must stow away in a tin box for fear it should grow stale. We must always keep the butter well covered, as it absorbs strange tastes so easily," and so on through the whole catalog of kitchen ethics.

Then the little maids were set to work cleaning potatoes. Of course they poised their knives aloft for the purpose, and of course Miss Stone gently but firmly bade them to drop them instantly. The best authorities on cuisine never parrot potatoes nowadays; they scrub them. Each girl was supplied with a small brush, which she applied to the earth apple's cuticle with such vigor that it was soon as white as her own fingers.

Then housekeeper No. 8 was bidden to place the potatoes in the stove for baking. "Ouch!" she cried, as she lifted the oven door and ran back in dismay. Housekeeper No. 7 was delegated to try. "Oo, oo, oo!" was the result of her first trial, as she hugged a tender little engagement finger and fled in consternation. The other girls only laughed and Miss Stone flew to the rescue. Beneath her "open sesame" the door started open like a dream. "You'll learn after awhile," she remarked smilingly. And the burned maidens sighed and said they hoped so, and once more the chorus giggled.

A Master Smokestack.

The master chimney of the new Fall River Iron Works mill, the largest in America and the fifth largest in the world, was completed recently. It is 250 feet above the ground. The bottom of the foundation is seven feet below tide water and sixteen feet below the ground, making the total height of the chimney 366 feet. The base is square for a distance of about thirteen feet from the ground, then tapers up gradually for about eight feet, and from that up the chimney is cylindrical in form. The diameter at the base is thirty feet, at the narrowest part it is fifteen feet. The base has a uniform diameter of eleven feet. The walls at the bottom are thirty-two inches thick and in the thinnest part twelve inches. It is built of brick above the foundation, the number used being 1,700,000.—N. Y. Telegram.

LET THE HEATHEN RAGE.

But the people will not imagine vain things. We are not here to see how we can please our competitors, have never been a member of any Shoe Dealers' Mutual Admiration society, and can't help it, and don't care if it hurts our competitors when we are closing out our stock to quit business, and are making prices which our competitors can't meet. The amount of affection which other shoe dealers have had for us has never been great, and the prices which we are now making makes them howl. We never before quoted such extraordinarily low prices as now and consequently the other shoe dealers of Decatur were never before quite so mad. They would call the people fools for taking the benefit of our marvelously low prices. But, the people who have to earn their money have sense enough to expend it where it will buy the most. So it is no use for other shoe dealers to howl; they can't divert the crowd from the great closing out sale of FERRISS & LAPLHAM, where the prices quoted below prove the sincerity of the wish to go out of business.

A Serious Assault.

Saturday evening Minnie Boyd and Flora Durbin appeared in Justice Curtis' court and swore out two state warrants for the arrest of Michael Phelan, jr., each charging him with an assault. Phelan was arrested and lodged in jail. At the trial he will be defended by Fred A. Brown. It appears that Phelan and other companions had attended a dance Friday night, and had called at the Mrs. Davis' place, south of the city. While there Phelan became involved in a quarrel and fight with a drunken stranger, and while the fight was going on Miss Boyd interfered to stop the fight, when she received a blow in the face. She alleges that she was knocked down and kicked on the body, one kick near the heart being of a serious nature. She was brought to the city in a carriage to visit a physician, who pronounced the injury dangerous.

MISS BOYD SPITTING BLOOD.

This morning young Phelan was brought before "Square" Curtis, but by agreement the trial was put off until next Monday. It was represented that Miss Boyd is much worse and has been spitting blood. She is unable to come up town. She may die from the effects of the injuries.

An Inquisition.

This afternoon in the county court an inquisition will be held to inquire into the alleged insanity of Wilson Perdue, who is 35 years of age. His home is near Elwin. A conservator will be selected to look after his property.

Funeral of the Late James Bristow.

The remains of the late James H. Bristow arrived in the city this noon from near San Diego, Cal., where his death occurred on November 25, of hemorrhage of the lungs. The deceased was 27 years of age. The funeral will take place from the residence of Martin Fleming, 429 East Cerro Gordo street to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. T. W. Pinkerton officiating.

Two Fine Roasts.

John G. Imboden, who was the referee at the Illinois Fat Stock show at Chicago, was generously remembered Saturday by his friend, Mr. Philip D. Armour, the Chicago millionaire, who sent to the Imboden Bros. two splendid roasts, weighing 50 pounds, cut from the noted sweepstakes yearling that took the first prize on foot at the show and also the first prize for dressed carcasses. The yearling weighed 1500 pounds on foot. It was bred and fed by J. M. Hill of Minnesota. The two roasts were on exhibition at the Imbo's meat market Saturday evening and they were seen by hundreds of patrons.

Going to Lynn.

John A. Brown will leave this week for Lynn, Mass., on a business trip. He will be absent a week or two.

There will be a rehearsal of the "Crowning of the Queen of Fame" at the opera house to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A Sunday Train.

The P. D. & E. changed their time card Sunday and the trains over that road will now arrive and depart as follows: Going north, No. 2 arrives at 2:50 p. m., and leaves at 2:55 p. m.; No. 4 arrives at 6:20 a. m., and leaves 6:40 a. m. Going south, No. 1 arrives at 10:40 and leaves at 11 a. m.; No. 3 arrives at 9:40 p. m., and leaves at 9:45 p. m.

"Stowaway" To-night.

The most striking dramatic novelty in the theatrical world this season, "The Stowaway," the famous English melodramatic success, will be given to-night at the Grand. Unlike most English melodramas, it does not depend upon persecuted female innocence for its central interest, but reverses the order of things and makes the hero the principal figure in the plot. The scenic effects in the play are superb, and have never been equalled in a melodrama of its class. Realism is effected and successfully attained both in a wonderful street scene which opens the play, and a yacht, under full sail, passing down the Thames and standing out to sea.

D. P. BURNS, who has been at work in the Wabash tin shop for the past three years and seven months, has resigned his position. He left this morning for Hammond, where he will probably settle and start a shop on his own hook.

Not Fools.

Notice some "ads" in recent issues of Decatur papers where our competitors say the people are fools because they (the people) trade with us. Such insolence ought to be "sat down on" and will be. The people crowd our store and the verdict of the people is always right. They are not fools. FERRELL & LAPHAM.

PETER LAUX IN TOWN.

He is here for the winter—he was at Oklahoma.

Peter Lanx, who has been enjoying life on the plains, and has been braving the dangers of the rowdy west for several years, arrived in the city last night from Pueblo, Colo., by way of St. Louis. The REPUBLICAN found the genial Pete in the St. Nicholas dining room this morning partaking of a hearty breakfast. He was looking well and confessed that he was glad to be back in bustling Decatur once more. He says it is his present intention to remain here all winter.

Since his absence Pete has been in Garden City, Kansas, engaged in various pursuits. When the promised land of the Oklahoma country was opened he was among the first to break over the lines, accompanied by Nicholas Lanx and his sons. Nick is now in Guthrie engaged in profitable business.

Within the past few months both daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Lanx were married. Miss Annie Lanx and Mr. Burke, a lumber merchant of Garden City, and Miss Mollie Lanx is the wife of Peter Rafferty, an extensive stock dealer whose ranch is within four miles of Garden City. A few friends of Peter are trying to get him to consent to deliver a series of lectures on life in Oklahoma and other points in the west. He may do so.

WIN HILDRETH, who was released from the service of the Citizens' Electric Street Railway Co., has been reinstated on the East Eldorado street car. It seems it was not the fault of the driver, but was on account of the brakeman refusing to act when applied by the driver. A petition was circulated on East Eldorado street and 150 signatures were affixed. It was handed to the company who placed Hildreth back on his former run.

A Smooth Devil.

Saturday night at the Grand a large and well pleased audience witnessed a dramatic and lurid performance of "Faust," with the distinguished American actor, Lewis Morrison, as the scheming Mephisto, attired in a flaming red costume, minus the historic ears and tail which had been worn off by time. The story of the production was told in forcible language, with philosophical embellishments, coupled with surprising pyrotechnic, electric light and mechanical effects. Mr. Morrison's impersonation of Mephisto was most artistically done. He was a smooth devil—smooth in action, perfect in facial expression, and in the judgment of the audience was an ideal Satan. The support included Miss Morrison, sister of the star, as Margurite, and other very clever people. It was a first-class performance.

Miss Ehrman at Boonville.

Edward Barter Perry, the renowned blind pianist of Boston gave a Chopin recital at Boonville, Mo., recently, in which Miss Frances Ehrman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Ehrman, of this city, took a prominent part as the prima donna. Miss Ehrman, who is the vocalist of the Howard Female College at Fayette, Mo., was thus spoken of in the local paper in connection with the concert:

Miss Ehrman, the accomplished vocalist of Howard College, accompanied by Misses Ledbetter, Thompson and Horn, also of H. F. C., attended the Perry musical entertainment in Boonville, Saturday evening. Miss Ehrman, by special request, assisted Prof. Perry in his entertainment, and delighted a fashionable Boonville audience with her charming voice.

Miss Ehrman had three numbers on the programme. They were selections from Rubinstein, Lassen, Robandi, Buck and Raft.

WOMAN'S INDUSTRIAL AND CHARITABLE UNION.

Office, North Park Street, Second Door from Water.

MRS. M. A. BRADLEY, Secy and Agent.

The first regular meeting of the Union will be held at the Woman's Club, Gallagher Block, on Tuesday, Dec. 3, at 10 o'clock, a. m. A general invitation is extended to all women who desire information as to the objects and methods of the society. The secretary will receive the names and annual fees of members. Ladies not yet assigned to either branch of the work will have an opportunity to make their selection. Members desiring to give one day's work each month to some branch of the Union can become "subscribing members," and will pay a monthly fee of 25 cents. A full attendance of all women interested in effective and intelligent work for the poor is requested. Press of business in her office has prevented Secretary Bradley from entering upon the canvas of the city for subscriptions to the Union, but it is hoped that she may be able to give her time to that work after Tuesday. Business men will do well to remember that through the cards of reference, which every subscriber receives, they can effectively rid themselves of street beggars and can insure the careful investigation and relief of real suffering or want.

Do not give to street beggars; send them to the Union for help.

HELP YOUR NEIGHBOR.

A Little Bit of Altruism Has Power to Bestow Unparcable Happiness.

An organization has recently been formed in this country, formed of men and women—the latter preponderating—whose motive and creed are as simple as they are lofty. To become a member and subscribe to the tenets of this organization, it is necessary to agree to one thing, to be pledged to one act. It is that each member shall, each and every day of his life, perform at least one act for the good of a fellow-being.

In this age of selfishness it is refreshing to learn that an assemblage of human beings can be found whose watchword is altruism, and who bind themselves to forget self at least once every twenty-four hours. The age in which we live seems one in which the plant selfishness finds a poor soil indeed. It grows sporadically, not generally, and is too often a stunted and weakly affair. And yet the need of altruism, of self-forgetting, is more widespread every year.

The rich grow richer, and, vice versa, the poor grow poorer. Selfishness, on the one hand, and sorrow on the other are growing quantities. Any measure that will lead toward warming into life the chilling embers of altruism must have the sanction and support of all right minded men and women. It is a small thing, indeed, to devote one impulse, one act each day, to the lightening of some other mortal's life burdens.

Opportunities offer to all of us at home and in the bustle and whirl of business life. There are heavy hearts all about us that we may make brighter; there are gloom and despair, and there are "gray days" that we can render more endurable by the sunshine of a kindly deed or sincerely spoken words. It is not necessary to bear the badge of the Red Cross society to bind up the wounded or alleviate pain. The keenest hurts do not flow blood, and the sorest bruises are not those of the flesh. They can be reached and cured by the exercise of the divine qualities of sympathy and unselfishness, and can be healed by those that never graduated in a school for trained nurses.

In every eighteen hours of waking life there are at least as many opportunities for the display of a practical, unostentatious bit of unselfishness that will make the recipient happier and the bestower happy as well. The organization referred to is one that should find encouragement from all that can realize what it is to be poor and friendless and hopeless. And even if they can not, it will at least be possible to give intelligent sympathy, to perform a small act of pure unselfishness for the mere pleasure which such doing affords. They will find that a little bit of altruism has power to bestow a happiness not parable and a delight beyond the scope of a bank note or a check to bestow. The sum of human happiness is not so great that individuals may not add thereto, and it is far easier to do this than most people imagine.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The "June Bug" Poem.

Edwin C. Colgan, editor of The Cumberland Gap, a weekly newspaper at Middleborough, Ky., died suddenly in this city last Monday of pneumonia. Mr. Colgan was author of the famous "June Bug" poem, which is familiar to every newspaper reader, and has been parodied in a thousand forms. Others laid claim to its composition, but Colgan could prove indisputably that it was his author. He wrote it about eight years ago, when he was a reporter on The Courier Journal of this city. It originally appeared as follows:

The June bug has a gaudy wing,
The lightning bug has fame;
The bed bug has no wings at all,
But he gets there all the same.

One night when news was scarce Mr. Colgan handed in this little poem with his batch of copy. The city editor allowed it to get into type, but the managing editor promptly killed it. The next day Mr. Colgan rewrote it and took it to Mr. Donald G. Padman, who was contributing a column of humorous paragraphs to the editorial page of The Courier-Journal. Mr. Padman placed it at the head of his column, and it appeared there on the following day.

The bit of rhyme was at once taken up by the press of the country, and has been reprinted in every village and town of the Union.—Louisville Telegram.

A Talking Pensioner.

A man down in Colerain township, Lancaster county, lost his pension a short time ago in a way that he thought for a time was rather mysterious, but he now understands. Three or four years ago he was allowed a pension for total disability, and he received the sum of $1,500, which he claimed to be due him. After that he received $14 a month. About two months ago the pensioner, who makes posts and rails and sets fence, was at work near his home, when a well dressed and pleasant looking stranger came by and engaged him in conversation. As the pensioner hewed the posts, the new comer began talking about that kind of work, and asked him how much he could do in a week. The pensioner, who is inclined to brag about himself, said that he could make more posts and set more fence in a day than any other man in the neighborhood. The stranger soon went away, and since that time the countryman has not received a pension. He has since learned that the stranger was a detective in the employ of the government, who had been sent there to find out whether he was as badly disabled as he claimed to be.—Reading (Pa.) Times.

Her Mother's Ghost.

A marriage which was to have taken place at Campden the other night, was interrupted in an unexpected way. The contracting parties, Henry Brown and Miss Mary Morgan, stood before Rev. Mr. Clayton, preparatory to becoming man and wife. A portion of the service had been already read, about fifty witnesses being present, when the bride uttered a loud scream. All eyes were immediately fixed upon her. She was seen to raise her hand and point toward a corner of the church. The next moment she fell on the floor in a swoon and had to be carried out. Physicians worked with her for nearly an hour before she was restored to consciousness. When fully recovered she gave a curious explanation of her conduct. Her mother, who died four months ago, was opposed to her marriage with Brown. The marriage was for a time delayed, but after Mrs. Morgan's death arrangements for it were pushed. Miss Morgan says that just when she was about to pronounce the binding words she raised her eyes and saw her mother's ghost; then she fainted. The wedding was postponed for several days.—New York Journal.

First Dairy School in America.

The state university can boast of having established the first dairy school in America. In this school will be given a thorough course in dairying, including butter and cheese making and the analysis of milk. Mr. O'Connell, a practical cheese maker, who has studied with Professor Robertson in Canada, and has given instructions in Sheboygan county under the auspices of the State Dairymen's association, will give instructions in cheese making, and Dr. Babcock in butter making and milk analysis. The dairy house will be provided with the wonderful Swedish butter extractor, which takes the butter directly from the milk.—Madison (Wis.) Telegram.

A new gem, the pierre Tonquinoise, is in the market. When cut like the diamond, it is said to be very beautiful. Its color is a dark blue, more brilliant than sapphire, though some varieties have a purple or red tint.
